

The Psychology of Finance - Lars Tweed

In this book the author provides a scientific approach to the psychology of the behavior of investors in financial markets. The basis of the book is the proposition that market participants - this is real people that are prone to emotions. Market participants use similar trading strategies and tactics that can predict the behavior of the market, you just need to keep your emotions under control and not to succumb to short-term emotional impulses.