

Closed position is a complete market transaction, which was closed through a reverse transaction. After closing the position by recalculation of the state of the deposit account held with a financial transaction. If you have previously opened position to buy any financial instrument, then closing the position in this case will be selling a financial instrument, completing this financial transaction. If you have previously opened transaction to sell, closing the position will be to purchase a financial instrument, as the inverse operation to the previous one. That is, as a result of closing the position switch to its original state with fixing the result, which can be either positive or negative, depending on the prices at which transactions were conducted on buying and selling financial instruments.
