

Lock is the implementation of two transactions in one currency pair in both directions of the same size. That is, a transaction is made on the sale, and the other on a purchase. Their volume is the same. In our trading platform you can perform multi-directional positions. This strategy is often used to "freeze" the current financial results in order to further minimize exposure to losses or increase profits.